LOUISVILLE THEATERS.

Several Managers and Actors Were Placed Under Arrest.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 26.—Pursuant to a Sunday closing order issued by the board of safety last Tuesday and directed at places of amusement, the police Sunday made wholesale arrests of managers and actors at three of Louisville's principal theaters in the afternoon. At Hopkins' vaudeville theater and the Buckingham, a burlesque house, and member of the Empire circuit, all the actors, the managers of the houses and the companies, the ticket sellers and the doorknockers were arrested, the actresses not being molested. At the Avenue theater, a Stair house, the scenery of the company billed for the coming week failed to arrive, but an extemporized turn was put on in order that this theater might test the law also. In no instance were the performances interrupted, officers standing in the wings and quietly serving their warrants when the actors came off after having filled their parts. No more arrests were made at night, those made in the afternoon being considered sufficient to afford a thorough test of the legality of the board of safety's order. The saloons, shops, etc., were allowed to open as usual without molestation. The Harmonic and Macaulay's, Louisville's two remaining principal playhouses, do not open on Sundays.

The body was found Sunday morning in a culvert, partially covered with water. The subject of the murder is not known. Augustus evidently had no chance, as he had a gun in his pocket. The boy, an, and has not been allowed to make a statement.

The bullet passed through Mrs. Brock's heart. She lived long enough to tell her husband, Harry Brock, who was lying on a bed, "I am shot." The Brock house is at 120 Shelby street.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE.

The Revenue Pushed Aside Everything in the House on Monday.

Frankfort, Feb. 27.—The Kentucky senate Monday afternoon adopted a bill creating the office of the state fire marshal. The marshal is to be appointed by the state commissioner of insurance and is to receive the annual salary of $2,400 to be paid out of a fund created by a tax of one-third of one per cent. on gross premiums collected by fire companies in the Kentucky field. The senate committee on municipalities had a lively meeting in hearing discussion of the house bills seeking to repeal certain legislative acts requiring the officials of the city of Middlesboro to take certain steps to pay interest on the city's bonded indebtedness. After a full hearing, the committee, by a vote of 5 to 3, decided to report the bills adversely, although they have passed the house.

The revenue bill pushed everything in the house aside again Monday and held the boards in the committee of the whole both at the morning and afternoon sessions. Several important sections were passed over, but a number were agreed to and adopted by the committee. The section increasing the state license for saloons from $150 to $225 was adopted, and the section requiring all taxes to be paid at the sheriff's office was stricken out. Representative McLean, of Covington, who is taking a prominent part in discussing all disputed sections of the bill, proposed an amendment to empower the city authorities to assess all railroad property inside the city limits, except actual trackage.

MANAGERS AND ACTORS.

The Cases Against Them Dismissed in the Louisville Police Court.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 27.—In the police court Judge McCann dismissed the cases against the managers and employees of the three theaters who were arrested Sunday for violations of the Sunday closing law. In his opinion, Judge McCann held that the singling out of three theaters was discrimination. He also stated that he was not passing upon the validity of the Sunday closing law, as that was not properly brought before him. To make a real test of the law, Judge McCann said it would be necessary to show that the law was really meant to be enforced, and not to discriminate against a certain class of alleged offenders. The city officials may make another test case.

PLACED UNDER ARREST.

It Is Charged He Let a Man Out of Prison Unlawfully.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., Feb. 27.—County Attorney T. W. Rose, of Morehead, Rowan county, released a prisoner from the city jail and was arrested. City Marshal Elliott arrested John Hall, and placed him in the lock-up. Rose went to the marshal and demanded the keys, and they were given to him. He then proceeded to the jail, unlocked the door and released Hall from custody. When the police judge discovered Rose's action he issued a warrant for his arrest. He was tried and held to the circuit court in the sum of $500 bond, while Marshal Elliott was fined $3 for contempt of court. The action of the county attorney is unprecedented, and caused a sensation.

TO TELEPHONE USERS.

Suppose you are Will Davis, at Mt. Vernon, and have called for Ben Cormney, Lancaster. When the party called for answers, first tell who and where you are, thus: "This is Will Davis, Mt. Vernon, is that Ben Cormney?" Then state your business in plain tones; don't talk too fast; keep lips within half inch of transmitter tube while speaking.

When you ring for "Central" don't leave phone because you are not answered within five seconds—like many telephone users do—but give operator chance to answer. Operator may be attending calls ahead of yours and will answer yours as soon as it can be reached. Toll line conversations are limited to five (5) minutes; extra charges for further time. By reading instructions given in the telephone Directory, and complying therewith, much delay and annoyance would be saved the telephone user as well as "Central." These suggestions are also applicable to calls within "exchange" limits.

"Listen in" on toll line phone before ringing for another station; line may be in use. "RING OFF."

Paste this on or near your phone.

This is the way the Richmond Climax figures it out, why more poor, poverty stricken people get hurt in railroad wrecks than rich ones: "It is stated on authority that the person who travels in a palace on wheels—a palace car—has only one chance of getting hurt before his journey's end, against thirty-six chances for his fellow passenger who travels in a common day coach. Naturally when a collision occurs, the weakest car suffers. In front of the train is a locomotive weighing one hundred tons; in the rear two or three passenger cars of twenty-five tons each. What, then, is the result? The ordinary coaches sandwiched between are telescoped and smashed. The poor people who cannot afford to ride in palace cars are killed, crippled and maimed, while the rich folks escape with a slight shakin' up."

REPRESENTATIVE B. O. BECKER of Ashland, has introduced a bill in the Legislature, making 50 per cent. of laborers' wages subject to attachment. This would be no bad law to have upon our statute books, as many a worthless scoundrel, who earns less than $50 per month, takes advantage of the present law to avoid payment of his honest debts.

JUDGE HARGIS has recently found the sanitary condition of the jail in Breathitt to be very bad. Wonder if it is any worse than it was when he was county judge.

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS

The bill to put Casey county in the Eighth district was passed by the Senate.

The gubernatorial boom of Senator W. H. Cox will be launched at a banquet in Frankfort next week.

Chief Justice Hobson announced that the Hon. John D. Carroll, of Henry county, had been appointed Commissioner of the Court of Appeals, under the terms of an act passed by the present Assembly. Mr. Carroll is one of the best known attorneys in the State.

There is a bill before the Kentucky Legislature to add Casey County to the Eighth Congressional District. We are not informed where the politics is concealed in this bill, but there is some in it, somewhere. We fail to see where it can or will benefit our county, district or state, and until "we are shown," we are against the bill.—Spencer Courier.

Democratic members of both houses of Congress are discussing the question as to a successor to Chairman Cowdell, of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. The candidates so far announced are Representative Griggs of Georgia, and Representative Flood, of Virginia. Mr. Griggs conducted the campaign for the party for the Fifty eighth Congress.

Mr. George Cogar, who was mentioned in the Frankfort correspondence to the Louisville Times as a possible candidate for congress from the Eighth district has denied all knowledge of the source from which the article emanated, and most emphatically denied any intention of becoming a candidate. "If I am a candidate I did not know it," said Mr. Cogar last night "and had no knowledge of my name having been mentioned by any paper of a possible candidate until the present moment."

A Frankfort special says: "Trustee W. P. Walton, of the State School of Reform at Lexington, called upon Chairman Redwine, of the Legislative Investigating Committee, this morning and urged the fullest investigation possible of the affairs and conduct of that institution which has been attacked by C. G. Emerson, a former employee. Mr. Walton has been a trustee of that institution since it was founded, having been first appointed by former Governor Bradley, and re-appointed by Governor Peckham. Two years ago at the Assembly session he urged the placing of supervision of the institution with the State Prison Commission."

ADJOINING COUNTIES

Winchester has ordered a new map of the city, and the houses are to be numbered.

Andrew Carnegie has donated $10,000 to the city of Somerset, Ky., for a free public library to be under the control of the city school authorities.

Lancaster is to have another bank—The Garrard State Bank and Trust Co. It will have a capital stock of $50,000 and most of the stock has been taken. Many of the monied men of that county are behind the enterprise.

Judge James Hargis and others, charged with the murder of James B. Marcum, Commonwealth's Attorney Adams moved for a change of venue. Pending a decision of the court the defendants were released on $10,000 bond each.

In the Breathitt Circuit Court Saturday indictments were returned against Jas. Hargis, Ed. Calahan, John Smith, John Abner, of Breathitt, and B. F. French, of this city for the murder of James B. Marcum. The indictment specifically charges conspiracy with Cart Jett and Tom White to do the crime and charges French, Smith and Abner with being accessories before the fact.—Winchester Democrat.

John Watkins, a Lexington negro, was tried at Owensville last week on the charge of having murdered William Mullins, a white man, on a train while passing through Bath county, and the jury gave him a sentence of life imprisonment although most of the jury were in favor of hanging him. Sunday he committed suicide in the Owensville jail by hanging himself to a ring in the wall by means of a leather belt he wore around his waist.

INTEMPERANCE OF NATIONS

Americans, after all, are only moderate drinkers, compared with those of other countries, remarks Pearson's Magazine. The average citizen of the United States, counting in women and children (which is not fair, but serves for the moment as a basis to figure upon), consumes in the course of a year liquors which contains one and one-third gallons of pure alcohol. But the Frenchmen, who, though one of the soberest, has become the worst drunkard in the world, absorbs annually three and a half gallons of alcohol. The Belgian and the Swiss come next, with a consumption of two and four-fifths gallons, the Italian with just a trifle less, the Englishman and German with two and a tenth, and the Australian about one and three-quarters gallons. On the other hand, the American citizen by no means stands at the top of the list in respect to sobriety. The Swede drinks only one and a sixth gallons of pure alcohol in a year; the Hollander drops considerably below him with one gallon, even the relatively virtuous Russian, notwithstanding his much advertised addiction to vodka, absorbs only a trifle more than six tenths of a gallon, and finally the Norwegian who occupies a proud eminence as the most abstemious man in the world, barely exceeds a modest half gallon of the stuff in a twelve month's potations. It might be added, for the sake of definiteness, that the average person in the United States annually drinks one and a third gallons of pure spirits (which are 50 per cent. alcohol), one and one third gallons of wine and sixteen and a quarter gallons of malt liquors, chiefly beer.

Our good friend E. Bullock, better known as "Tub," says he is afflicted with acromegaly or some other similar affliction, as he has grown about 2 1/2 inches in height in the last two years. This is given as a fact and not as a joke, which is a very unusual occurrence for a man of his age.

By the death of L. L. Jarrett, the office of Jailer of this county, becomes vacant. We understand that some of Mr. Jarrett's family, who will in all probability be the present deputy, O. V. Through trains from Knoxville, Tenn., to St. Louis by way of Louisville will be put into service by the L. H. and St. L. and L. & N. railroads. This does not mean that additional trains will be put on at this time, but simply the coaches which leave Knoxville on No. 24, the early morning train, will go into St. Louis and likewise the coaches, which leave St. Louis will go through to Knoxville, which does away with any change or transfer at Louisville. We trust that this change will result in an additional train, which we so badly need.

The Rockcastle Home Telephone Company has purchased the interests of the Bastin Company in this county and took charge of the exchanges, lines etc. yesterday March 1st. Wednesday was Ash Wednesday the beginning of the Lenten season. It is so called because on that day the faithful assemble at their respective churches to receive the sign of the cross made with ashes upon their foreheads by the officiating priest. As he signs each one the priest says: "Remember man thou art dust, and unto dust thou shalt return."

We are under obligations to several, who have been kind enough to report to us such happenings as they knew. This we appreciate and we trust there will be others. It is impossible, without some assistance to hear of every thing that is going on in the county and we don't want to slight anybody or omit any item of interest to the readers of the Signal.

Some of the land under question is held by the Minks on Eagle creek and some by A. J. Norton, under a sheriff's deed for taxes. John Fredericks and Nicholas Mink have been dead about fifty years. From what we have been able to learn, it seems that Mr. Fredericks will more than likely regain a good portion of the land.

A movement is on foot among Louisville ministers to abandon Sunday night services and substitute afternoon services. The Sunday school hours also may be changed to afternoon.

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood needs a proper tonic. A chemical analysis of the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished our doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as National delay in the acquisition of these "reserves" would be dangerous and wasteful. Timber land which a few years ago could have been purchased at $1.50 to $3 an acre has now trebled and quadrupled in value. A national delay will mean a further increase in cost. Congress should act once and preserve from destruction one of the greatest resources of the nation.

Only hardshell nuts should be fed to park squirrels. The teeth of a squirrel grow so fast that he needs hard shell nuts to keep them at the proper length. A squirrel's teeth will grow so long that he cannot eat.

The Old Folks Were Absent.
A man came up to a lecturer in a hotel in Kansas City, saying with enthusiasm: "Well, sir, I enjoyed your lecture very much last night." "I didn't see you here," remarked the lecturer. "Oh, I wasn't there." "Well, what do you mean by telling me you enjoyed my lecture, and you were not present?" "Oh, I bought tickets for my girl's father and mother, and they both went!"

The Wireless Death

By C.S. Raymond

In the early morning the crowds which spent most of the night at the bulletin-board were gathering again. At no time had the place been entirely deserted. Several men had never been out of eyeshot of the bulletins. One of them, a shock-headed youth in overalls and wearing the cap of a government electrician, sat on the stone curbing by the entrance to the power station, smoking a small black pipe, seemingly more occupied with meditation than observation.

Most of the men who were now gathering about the board, were coal miners on their way to the shafts. Here and there were electricians. The vastness of the power station from which they had come, was no more than suggested from where the crowd stood, the buildings being partially hid in a grove of trees.

The groups of miners and electricians were almost silent. They seemed to have exhausted comment and surmise, and to be waiting for the tangible to take place of conjecture.

On the Verge of War.

In Washington the federal news editor apparently had worn out himself and his staff in keeping up a detailed account of the all-night session of Congress. As daylight came, the service wobbled, and what had been a connected, well-sustained story of congressional proceedings had slumped to a series of jerky bulletins of which the last had come a half-hour before, reading:

"Williams still has the floor. He is making no headway against the majority. War seems inevitable."

To the men starting for the shafts, this carried no news which they had not known before they had gone away, a few hours earlier, to get such sleep and rest as they could.

While they stood watching, another bulletin came:

"Congress has taken an hour's recess for breakfast. No action."

The coal miners in the crowd read this, and then started for work. Soon there were left only a few scattered groups; but the shock-headed electrician still sat on the curb and smoked his black pipe.

Mail by Airship.

A speck developed in the eastern sky and drew nearer, enlarging rapidly. Then the Washington mail came into sight, and landed at the airplane station near the entrance to the power station. A mail clerk came down the elevator after the sacks had been thrown into the chute. He was questioned eagerly by the men still standing about the bulletin board, but had nothing of news later than that which the bulletins had given them.

As he stood talking, another message was flashed on the board:

"Williams says that opposition to the majority will cease. War will be declared before night."

At that the shock-headed youth arose suddenly from the curbstone, walked rapidly through the gates and on into the grounds of the power station.

Vast Central Power Station.

The Susquehanna Coal and Power District, supplying not only Washington, but New York with electricity for all purposes of light, heat, and power, was the largest of the government power areas into which the country was divided. Its coal mines were of the greatest extent, its power station gigantic, and its employees an army. New York with its millions, and Washington with its institutions, secured all power from the wires charged by the dynamoes of the Susquehanna District.

The shock-headed electrician kept his rapid stride through the grounds until he came to a one-story brick building marked over its doorway, with the word "Administration." It was surrounded by beds of sweet-peas, which a gardener then was watering. The young man went up the gravelled walk without looking to right or left, pushed open the door, went the length of the inner hall, turned to the right, and knocked at a closed door.

He was told to enter, and did so, taking off his cap.

A middle-aged, gray-haired, spectacled man sat at a desk in the center of the room. He did not look up until the young electrician was standing beside his desk. Then he glanced at him sideways inquiringly.

Young Inventor Busy.

"Mr. Shod," said the younger man, "I want a two weeks' leave of absence." The elder then looked squarely at him but did not reply, merely brushing back his hair in an abstracted, preoccupied manner. The young man, waited for an answer without repeating his petition.

"Go back to work," said Shod, finally, seeming to dismiss the request as preposterous. He had started to speak calmly, but his manner changed, and he brought his fist down on the desk as he added sharply:

"Atsins, you make me think you're crazy. Haven't you read the bulletins? Look here—a message from the chief. 'We expect you to run double capacity from the instant war is declared.' Leave of absence! Man, go back to work."

Atsins became confused and awkwardly abashed; but he persisted, nevertheless, urging great necessity.

"If you even ask again," cried Shod, becoming thoroughly angry, "I'll have you locked up for attempting desertion."

Daring Plan Explained.

He wheeled around in his chair, and busied himself with the wires leading off the keyboard on his desk. Atsins hesitated an instant, and then suddenly lost his awkwardness and became alert. He bent over his senior, speaking rapidly, energetically, and sharply. He drew from the inner pocket of his blouse a print, spreading it before Shod. The anger of the older man gave way to astonishment. He was held spellbound by the younger's vehement explanation, until finally Atsins ceased talking, folded up his print, returned it to his pocket, and stood waiting.

Shod contemplated him silently for several moments. Then he said:

"You have a chance. It is too great a chance to lose. It might be our salvation. I'll inform the chief."

He reached over toward the keyboard but Atsins put out a restraining hand and held him, shaking his head in vigorous protest.

"Well, I guess you are right there, too," the older man said; "do as you think best."

Catches Airship for Capital.

Atsins turned away instantly, and again with rapid stride went through the grounds. On looking at his watch, he broke into a run heading for the airplane station. By quick sprinting he reached the lift just as it was making its last trip up to connect with the fast Washington mail ship. It touched as he came out on the platform, and he was aboard just in time.

Nation in a Trance.

In the early history of the nation there had been a much applauded maxim: "In time of peace, prepare for war." The people had never deviated from their policy of applauding and ignoring this wisdom of one of their earliest statesmen. The nation had never lost its complacency—had never succeeded in disillusioning itself. It imagined itself peaceful, but in reality, it was quick to resent an injury, fancied or real, sure to raise a popular demand for war, and least prepared to carry it on.

Death to Distant Fleet.

"But you don't understand," exclaimed Atsins, quickly and vehemently. "Now's the time, don't you see? That will direct a million volts—two million volts—accurately to any distance, at any object. Man, if it works, if it will do it—don't you see?"

Montrus stared at the shock-headed boy in a daze.

Atsins held himself in check and leaned forward.

"Will the ships at Kiel ever leave their moorings if it works?" he asked, drawing in his breath sharply. "The two men looked at each other, and, as Montrus stared, he saw also in his mental vision those hundred dark shanes on the face of the reflector.

Then he pressed a series of buttons on his desk, and men entered from different doors.

"Take this young man, Mr. —?"

"Not a name," said Atsins. "Just an idea."

"Take this idea," continued Montrus.

itself no thought of the inevitable product of incompetence urged into action by rashness.

In all this unprepared country, no one appreciated so thoroughly the impending danger as did Montrus, the unfortunate commander-in-chief of the small military forces.

Commander in Despair.

He had been dean of the Department of electricity in the national university, when transferred to the military service, having, prior to this been an instructor in one of the national military schools. In appearance he was scholarly, his figure spare and bent, his hair and eyes gray, and his face lined.

He was alone in his office, looking out of the window across the Potomac—the only inactive figure in the War Department—when one of his aides entered the room.

"Curtis has been located," said the aide. "He is at Kiel. We got his signal followed by some code which is being transcribed."

Another aide came in.

"Curtis says he is effectively hidden, and can send electrigraphs if we can take them."

"Where is he?" asked Montrus eagerly.

Scouting the Upper Air.

"He says he is out of the path of their scouts, and thinks he is safely posted. He must be above them."

"Can you reach him?"

"We have, but he warns us not to try often. I suppose his position is precarious at best."

"Tell him to send what he can," answered Montrus. "I'll go into the tower to take it."

A hundred yards farther up the Potomac, stood a gigantic tower, the exact longitude and latitude of which was burned in the memory of every operative in the secret service. To this, Montrus and his aides hastened, being carried directly to the summit by a lift.

While the aides adjusted the films and reflector of the electro-photographer, Montrus stood at the railing looking out over the peaceful river scene and drumming his fingers on the wooden bars.

"I think it is coming," said one of the aides finally, and the general stepped over to adjust about his head the hood which shut all light from the eyes looking at the reflector.

Looking Across the Ocean.

At first this remained in black and ink darkness. Then came little waves of dim light which rippled across its surface. These ripples became stronger; indistinct shapes, unrecognizable and mystic, seemed to rise out of its depths. They cleared away, and there grew up in their place the forms of a city's roofs and towers, which stood revealed in distinct outlines for a moment and then seemed to drop further and further down into the reflector.

White, fleecy clouds came between the eye and the city's roofs, the latter growing less and less distinct. There was a sweep of a dark object athwart the clouds. It crossed the entire reflector, blotting it out in blackness again, but light followed almost instantly. Again nothing but the white clouds, but finally a far-off flock of specks, which came nearer and nearer until they stood out each distinctly and separately, clear-cut in outline and identity. There they stood.

Aerial Torpedo Boats.

Montrus almost held his breath as he ran his eyes over them. For ten minutes he studied. Then he drew the hood from his head, and looked out over the river scene again.

"A hundred, I should say," he remarked at last, quietly, but in great bitterness. "Every one ready. In twenty-four hours from the time those awful fools in Congress declare war, those hundred torpedo ships will be here. Tell Curtis we've seen enough."

With that he went back to his office, and in moodiness took his post by the window again. Nothing he could plan could avert the calamity he had seen in readiness. Presently one of the aides came in again.

"A government electrician is outside," he announced, "and insists on seeing you. We have done everything to get rid of him but throw him off the grounds."

The man stopped and waited expectantly.

"Tell him—" said Montrus angrily, but stopped. "Let him in," he concluded, sullenly.

Young Inventor to the Rescue.

The aide went out and came back with the shock-headed electrician who had spent the night before by the bulletin-board. His embarrassment was great, but his earnestness equalled it. The former showed in his awkward posture and twitching fingers; the latter, in the direct look with which he sought the general's eyes.

"Well," exclaimed Montrus, sharply. "I have a concentrator—I want you to look at it—I thought—" he began excitedly, but ended brokenly in the face of a cold stare from Montrus.

"Here it is," he concluded, unfolding the prints.

Montrus cast one careless and a second interested glance at the plans. He drew up a chair and studied them, the moodiness giving away to keen appreciation. Then he pushed them away.

"You seem to have something," he said. "Some other time, if there's anything left of this country, some other time I'll look at them. But not now. I can't now."

Death to Distant Fleet.

"But you don't understand," exclaimed Atsins, quickly and vehemently. "Now's the time, don't you see? That will direct a million volts—two million volts—accurately to any distance, at any object. Man, if it works, if it will do it—don't you see?"

Montrus stared at the shock-headed boy in a daze.

Atsins held himself in check and leaned forward.

"Will the ships at Kiel ever leave their moorings if it works?" he asked, drawing in his breath sharply. "The two men looked at each other, and, as Montrus stared, he saw also in his mental vision those hundred dark shanes on the face of the reflector.

Then he pressed a series of buttons on his desk, and men entered from different doors.

"Take this young man, Mr. —?"

"Not a name," said Atsins. "Just an idea."

"Take this idea," continued Montrus.

itself no thought of the inevitable product of incompetence urged into action by rashness.

In all this unprepared country, no one appreciated so thoroughly the impending danger as did Montrus, the unfortunate commander-in-chief of the small military forces.

Commander in Despair.

He had been dean of the Department of electricity in the national university, when transferred to the military service, having, prior to this been an instructor in one of the national military schools. In appearance he was scholarly, his figure spare and bent, his hair and eyes gray, and his face lined.

He was alone in his office, looking out of the window across the Potomac—the only inactive figure in the War Department—when one of his aides entered the room.

"Curtis has been located," said the aide. "He is at Kiel. We got his signal followed by some code which is being transcribed."

Another aide came in.

"Curtis says he is effectively hidden, and can send electrigraphs if we can take them."

"Where is he?" asked Montrus eagerly.

Scouting the Upper Air.

"He says he is out of the path of their scouts, and thinks he is safely posted. He must be above them."

"Can you reach him?"

"We have, but he warns us not to try often. I suppose his position is precarious at best."

"Tell him to send what he can," answered Montrus. "I'll go into the tower to take it."

A hundred yards farther up the Potomac, stood a gigantic tower, the exact longitude and latitude of which was burned in the memory of every operative in the secret service. To this, Montrus and his aides hastened, being carried directly to the summit by a lift.

While the aides adjusted the films and reflector of the electro-photographer, Montrus stood at the railing looking out over the peaceful river scene and drumming his fingers on the wooden bars.

"I think it is coming," said one of the aides finally, and the general stepped over to adjust about his head the hood which shut all light from the eyes looking at the reflector.

Looking Across the Ocean.

At first this remained in black and ink darkness. Then came little waves of dim light which rippled across its surface. These ripples became stronger; indistinct shapes, unrecognizable and mystic, seemed to rise out of its depths. They cleared away, and there grew up in their place the forms of a city's roofs and towers, which stood revealed in distinct outlines for a moment and then seemed to drop further and further down into the reflector.

White, fleecy clouds came between the eye and the city's roofs, the latter growing less and less distinct. There was a sweep of a dark object athwart the clouds. It crossed the entire reflector, blotting it out in blackness again, but light followed almost instantly. Again nothing but the white clouds, but finally a far-off flock of specks, which came nearer and nearer until they stood out each distinctly and separately, clear-cut in outline and identity. There they stood.

Aerial Torpedo Boats.

Montrus almost held his breath as he ran his eyes over them. For ten minutes he studied. Then he drew the hood from his head, and looked out over the river scene again.

"A hundred, I should say," he remarked at last, quietly, but in great bitterness. "Every one ready. In twenty-four hours from the time those awful fools in Congress declare war, those hundred torpedo ships will be here. Tell Curtis we've seen enough."

With that he went back to his office, and in moodiness took his post by the window again. Nothing he could plan could avert the calamity he had seen in readiness. Presently one of the aides came in again.

"A government electrician is outside," he announced, "and insists on seeing you. We have done everything to get rid of him but throw him off the grounds."

The man stopped and waited expectantly.

"Tell him—" said Montrus angrily, but stopped. "Let him in," he concluded, sullenly.

Young Inventor to the Rescue.

The aide went out and came back with the shock-headed electrician who had spent the night before by the bulletin-board. His embarrassment was great, but his earnestness equalled it. The former showed in his awkward posture and twitching fingers; the latter, in the direct look with which he sought the general's eyes.

"Well," exclaimed Montrus, sharply. "I have a concentrator—I want you to look at it—I thought—" he began excitedly, but ended brokenly in the face of a cold stare from Montrus.

"Here it is," he concluded, unfolding the prints.

Montrus cast one careless and a second interested glance at the plans. He drew up a chair and studied them, the moodiness giving away to keen appreciation. Then he pushed them away.

speaking rapidly, "to Sending Station 10, the largest. Let him direct any changes he desires. Tell Susquehanna to give us ten times the usual power from now until notified otherwise."

The men started to obey, and Atsins to follow his guides, when Montrus stepped to him, holding out his hands.

"I hope you succeed," he said.

"I—I can't fail," stammered the young man.

ACTIVE NORWEGIAN WOMEN.

Occupy Good Positions as Stewards on Coasting Steamers.

Bright young women in Norway find a rational and congenial employment in a vocation which has not been invaded by their sex in this country. The many steamers that plow the Norwegian fjords and Scandinavian estuaries and rivers employ young women to see to the commissariat and to arrange for the personal comfort of travelers on board. Their official designation is that of "auxiliary ship's officer." That their occupation is a pleasant one is proved by the numerous applications at steamboat offices from young Danish, Swedish and Norwegian ladies anxious to secure such positions. This life on the inland lakes and rivers, is stated in fact to be immensely popular with the strong and energetic girls of Northern Europe. That the duties involved necessitate a girl's wearing a head on her shoulders goes without saying, and many of the applicants are daughters of either naval or professional men, such as lawyers and doctors.

It is the duty of the "auxiliary ship's officer," to ascertain from the purser of the ship how many passengers are booked on the outgoing voyage and to lay in her provisions accordingly, at the same time avoiding any risk in the matter of waste. She is further responsible for the tastefully laid table and for such additional house-linen as may be required in the cabins during the voyage. Plate, china and even kitchen utensils are generally her own property, so that she must necessarily possess business ability in her selection and care. Payments are arranged at so much per head and the lady steward nets the profits over and above the actual expenses, and beyond this may depend upon complimentary contributions from the traveler, which being a customary thing, may be offered and accepted without offense.

Such an occupation with its self-respecting independence and its breezy, open-air surroundings, is healthful and exhilarating, while the constant stream of passengers and tourists, both old and new, tends to the formation of pleasant acquaintances, at all seasons of travel.

Another post filled by women on board the Norwegian mail steamers is that of "postal official." Two of these young ladies always travel together, their sole duty consisting in carrying the mail bags to and from the points of embarkation and arrival. During the voyage, the time of these girls is practically their own, and they generally may be seen employing it in producing those much-admired "Hosfolds featherings"—the beautiful Norwegian embroideries to be met with in such rich profusion throughout the Scandinavian lands. These "post ladies," however, never allow their elaborate needlework to jeopardize their official position as government employees; for long before the landing-stage is reached, both may be seen cloaked and hatted, standing, as it were, at attention. By reason of the precious burdens they bear, they are the first to leave the boat.

Miss Roosevelt's Turnips.

The first instalment of wedding gifts which reached Miss Alice Roosevelt was turnips, the largest known in the art of farming. These mammoth affairs "Colonel Sellers' Fruit," were shipped to Miss Roosevelt by a tiller of the soil in Kansas, who said that the proud farmers of this country should not be outdone by the jewelers, and that they have worked hard to produce the best possible growths this winter with ONLY ONE OF ITS KIND.

This is what we SAY, now how do we PROVE it? We send any reliable person our 100 "Gravity" Washers free of charge for a full month's trial, and we even pay the freight out of our own pockets. No cash deposit is asked, no notes, no contract, no security.

You may use the washer four weeks out of your experience. If you find it won't wash as many clothes as you can wash by hand in FORTY hours, you send it back to the railway station, that's all.

But, if, from a month's actual use, you are convinced it saves HALF the time in washing, does every job better, and does it twice as easily as it could be done by hand, you keep the machine.

We have sold approaching half a million "Gravity" Washers since we started, and we are now shipping them at the rate of 500 a day. We intend that the 100 "Gravity" Washers shall pay for itself and thus cost you nothing.

You don't risk a cent from first to last, and you don't pay until you have had a full month's trial. We have sold approaching half a million "Gravity" Washers on a month's free trial and the only trouble we've had has been to keep up our orders.

Could we afford to pay freight on thousands of these machines every month, if we did not positively KNOW that you would do all we claim for them? You afford to be without a machine that will do your washing in HALF THE TIME, with half the wear and tear of the washboard. When you can have the machine for a month's free trial, and let it PAY FOR ITSELF, why not have it? We will withdraw at any time if overworked our factory.

which to stock the cellar of the future Mrs. Longworth. Huge potatoes were also sent from South Dakota, where they raise potatoes which are said to be so large that one potato will feed six persons. Pumpkins came likewise from South Dakota, each large enough to furnish pies for the family for one winter. If the Longworth couple do not live on the fat of the land for at least one season, it has not been the fault of the admiring farmers.

Hard to Believe.

A city man was showing a country cousin through the Metropolitan Museum. "See that bunch of old Egyptian oins over there, Reub?" he said, pointing to one of the showcases; "well, every one of those coins is over three thousand years old." "Quit yer kiddin'," retorted the countryman. "Why, it's only 1906 now."

Let this "1900" Gravity Washing Machine do your Washing Free.

An unseen power, called Gravity, helps run this washer. By harnessing this power, we make it work for you. You start the washer by hand, then Gravity-power takes hold and does the hard part. And it makes this machine turn almost as easy as a bicycle wheel does.

Gravity, you know, is what makes a stone roll down hill.

This machine has just been invented and we call it the "1900" Gravity Washer.

There are slots on the inside bottom of the tub. These slots act as paddles to swing the water in the same direction you revolve the tub.

You throw the soiled clothes into the tub first. Then you throw enough water over the clothes to fill them.

Next you put the heavy wooden cover on top of the clothes to anchor them, and to press them down.

Then you revolve the tub by the handle on the side of the tub, and you revolve the tub one-third way round, then gravity pulls it the other way round.

The machine must have a little help from you, as every swing, but Gravity-power does practically all the work.

You can sit in a rocking chair and do all that the washer requires of you. A child can run it easily and full of clothes.

When you revolve the tub the clothes don't move. But the water moves like a mill race through the clothes.

The paddles on the tub bottom drive the soapy water through and through the clothes at every swing of the tub. Back and forth, in and out every side, and through every mesh in the cloth, the hot soapy water runs like a torrent. This is how it carries away all the dirt from the clothes, in from six to ten minutes.

I drive the dirt out through the meshes of the fabric WITHOUT ANY RUBBING, without any scrubbing, and without any use of soap.

It will wash the linens and fabrics without breaking a thread, or a button, and it will wash a heavy, dirty carpet with equal ease and rapidly. Fifteen or twenty garments, or five large bed-sheets, can be washed at one time with this "Gravity" Washer.

A child can do this in six to twenty minutes better than any male washer-woman could do the same amount of work in twice the time, with three times the wear and tear from the washboard.

The wick at the end of the long leg of the improvised siphon is separated into several strands, on each strand being placed in each pot to be watered. The caretaker may now go away for the day with the assurance that his flowers will receive all the water necessary. In warm weather it is best to cover the pail and wrap the tube cloth, to prevent the wick from drying. The German inventor of this device says it has always worked successfully.
